What Is Web 2.0

Design Patterns and Business Models for the Next Generation of Software

by Tim O'Reilly
09/30/2005

Oct. 2009: Tim O'Reilly and John Battelle answer the question of "What's next for Web 2.0?" in Web Squared: Web 2.0 Five Years On.

The bursting of the dot-com bubble in the fall of 2001 marked a turning point for the web. Many people concluded that the web was overhyped, when in fact bubbles and consequent shakeouts appear to be a common feature of all technological revolutions. Shakeouts typically mark the point at which an ascendant technology is ready to take its place at center stage. The pretenders are given the bum's rush, the real success stories show their strength, and there begins to be an understanding of what separates one from the other.

The concept of "Web 2.0" began with a conference brainstorming session between O'Reilly and MediaLive International. Dale Dougherty, web pioneer and O'Reilly VP, noted that far from having "crashed", the web was more important than ever, with exciting new applications and sites popping up with surprising regularity. What's more, the companies that had survived the collapse seemed to have some things in common. Could it be that the dot-com collapse marked some kind of turning point for the web, such that a call to action such as "Web 2.0" might make sense? We agreed that it did, and so the Web 2.0 Conference was born.

In the year and a half since, the term "Web 2.0" has clearly taken hold, with more than 9.5 million citations in Google. But there's still a huge amount of disagreement about just what Web 2.0 means, with some people decrying it as a meaningless marketing buzzword, and others accepting it as the new conventional wisdom.

Web 3.0, the “official” definition.

jasoncalacanis October 3, 2007 1 Minute

Some folks have been asking me for the clear definition of the term Web 3.0.

- Web 3.0 is defined as the creation of high-quality content and services produced by gifted individuals using Web 2.0 technology as an enabling platform.

Web 2.0 services are now the commoditized platform, not the final product. In a world where a social network, wiki, or social bookmarking service can be built for free and in an instant, what's next?

Web 2.0 services like digg and YouTube evolve into Web 3.0 services with an additional layer of individual excellence and focus. As an example, funnyordie.com leverages all the standard YouTube Web 2.0 feature sets like syndication and social networking, while adding a layer of talent and trust to them.

A version of digg where experts check the validity of claims, corrected errors, and restated headlines to be more accurate would be the

If Web 2.0 was so hot, how about Web 3.0? This has been a recurrent theme of would-be meme-engineers who want to position their startup as the next big thing. Nova Spivack started it by describing the as-yet-to-be-revealed Radar Networks as Web 3.0, but now Jason Calacanis has his competing definition, neatly tailored to fit his own mahalo.com. The resulting storm of derision is entirely to be expected.

Now, I of all people should be hesitant to say "Web 3.0 is a stupid idea" because of course that same criticism was leveled at "Web 2.0." But Не следует путать с Web 3.0 — концепцией, основанной на семантической паутине.

Web3^[1] — это идея новой итерации Всемирной паутины на основе блокчейна, которая включает в себя такие концепции, как децентрализация и экономика на основе токенов^{[2][3][4]}. Некоторые специалисты и журналисты противопоставляют её Веб 2.0, где, по их мнению, данные и контент централизованы в небольшой группе компаний, иногда называемых GAFAM^[5]. Термин был придуман в 2014 году соучредителем Ethereum Гэвином Вудом, а в 2021 году идеей заинтересовались криптовалютные энтузиасты, крупные технологические компании и венчурные фирмы^{[5][6]}.
